#Content for #eyeballs

Hello, my children.

3-0. Undefeated heading down to play Wake Forest. Unfortunately, for the second week, I was unable to actually attend the Irish victory, but a win is a win all day. Once again, the Irish started fast and finished slow, hoping that we all had our hearts firmly placed in our throats until the end of the game.

This version of the Fighting Irish seem dead-set on making the second half of each game interesting. Bold move, Brian Kelly. While he might enjoy it, I actually like touchdowns, so his strategy of trying to kick as many field goals as possible seems weird to me. Maybe it's a new-age thing. Is this how I discover that I'm old? By Brian Kelly slowly, but surely, draining my soul from my body one Justin Yoon field goal at a time?

He could just really like Justin Yoon and want him to become the all-time leading scorer in Irish history. I don't know. Either way, this seems like it will be a pertinent meme for the rest of the season, which can definitely be used as a phone background:

Song of the week: Odesza - Loyal

- Yes, sure, you probably heard this for the first time on the Apple announcement of the new iPhone, but the track rules and Odesza is v v good. So, Apple should know that I didn't hear about this song through them, but, instead, through my own eclectic vision of an ever-more-so musical world. Goodbye. Trap horns forever.

1L OF THE WEEK

The 1L of the week is Eric Rigoli. It might be difficult to figure out from the image below, but he is the man in the middle, wearing the grey suit. Grey suits are good for studying law, because this comic strip told me so.

Q: Where did you attend undergrad?

A: Quinnipiac University in Connecticut.

Q: Where is your hometown?

A: Shelton, Connecticut.

Q: What did you do before law school?

A: So before Undergrad, I was in the Marines for five years, then I did undergrad and then I came to law school.

Q: Have you picked a side in the ongoing feud between Cardi B and Nicki Minaj?

A: I would say Nicki Minaj. She's a veteran, she's been out there longer so I'm going to take her side. I feel like she's got better staying power.

Q: Can you tell the difference between the new iPhone and the old iPhone? If so, what is the difference? They seem the same.

A: I haven't seen the new iPhone. So the X is different because it doesn't have the button and I need the button.

I told Eric that the new ones don't seem to have buttons

A: I need the button, that's awful. They should bring it back.

I agree, Eric. I agree.

Q: What's the coolest animal you have ever seen?

A: When I was in Australia I saw a Tasmanian Devil, so that was pretty cool. They kinda look like a badger. They're like maybe a cross between a badger and a wolverine, but small.

Q: What is your fantasy football team's name and how are they doing this week?

A: Son of Sam Darnold; they are doing terrible. I have Barkley going so hopefully they can resurrect my team this week but it doesn't look like it's gonna happen.

Q: What is the "fun fact" you use in ice-breakers and what is the other "fun fact" you don't actually tell people?

A: Kangaroos can't hop backwards. I don't know where I got that from but it's true - they can't hop backwards.

Q: Have been been cold-called yet? How did it go?

A: I was cold-called in Professor Tidmarsh's Torts class and it went pretty well. He really hits you with the hypotheticals so you just kinda got to roll with it.

Q: Do you have anything else you'd like to say to all of your fans?

A: Do I have fans? It's gonna be tough finding me on social media so they're going to have to find me in person.*

I encourage all of the 1Ls to do just that. You know from this interview that Eric is in Tidmarsh's class, so you have some solid intel from the jump. Get it done, y'all.

Q: Who do you nominate to talk to me next week because of my personal fear of picking a random 1L to ask?

A: I would go with Nick Osterman. I want to break away from the twin thing - Nick speaks German, so that should be good.

#3LOL OF THE WEEK

This week's 3LOL of the week.... is Heather Pearson!

I met Heather Pearson during orientation of my 1L year. We bonded over politics in August of 2016, and since that day, neither of us have talked about politics to anyone. That's how good the conversation was. We figured that, since we figured the whole "politics" thing out, that it was just better to leave that whole thing alone.

Heather spent the last year in London and elsewhere around the world. She is an international lady, and took her interest in equitable outcomes for disparate parties with her abroad. In November of 2017, in a dimly lit pub in Surrey, Heather met a contact from the Bosnian Embassy located in London. Heather has expertise in Eastern European politics, and this contact had a specific problem. In recent years, Bosnia & Herzegovina's population suffers a worsening Vitamin D deficiency epidemic.

The problem? Croatia has all of Bosnia & Herzegovina's beaches. All of them. From all of her time spent on the American east coast, Heather has a unique understanding of the impacts that a lack of beaches has on local populations. So she proposed a solution - she would travel to Zagreb to engage directly as an emissary of the American government intermediary to negotiate an exchange of beaches from Croatia to the Bosnians.

It was not that simple. Croatia, simply, has amazing beaches. Heather's main negotiation tactic - simply saying that Croatia's possession of these beaches makes absolutely no sense - was not working in the early going. She brought gifts. She wined. She dined. Nothing.

The Bosnian government in Sarajevo grew impatient, especially since Heather split most of her remaining time during the last school year between London and every single beach town in Croatia: Pula, Rijeka, Zadar, Split, and Makarska.

Finally, she had a breakthrough when she met famous Croatian footballer Luca Modric at an art fair in Klek, Croatia. They were bidding on the same piece of pottery. Modric, with limited time, attempted to outbid Heather, but the seller had a strict "whoever bids first, bids best," and gave Heather the pot. Modric, incensed, demanded Heather sell him the golden pot. She had leverage. She promised to give Modric the pot if he would aid in her diplomatic endeavor. He agreed.

Within weeks, in May of 2018, Heather, with the help of Luca Modric, negotiated the release of a small stretch of beach front property from the Croatians to the Bosnians at Neum - a beautiful beachfront villa town. The whole of Eastern Europe rejoiced. Modric, with his new pottery in-hand, went on to dominate the World Cup in Russia. Heather returned to America with a nice tan and a fun story.

So if you see Heather around school, thank her for her diplomatic escapades. They've helped us all. Buy her coffee!

Long Reads of the Week

- You Owe Me An Apology
 - “I’m a black woman in America. I have been owed plenty of apologies. I just never believed I deserved to demand one.”
- The Untold Stories of Paul McCartney
 - He’s as famous and accomplished as a man can be. He could just stay home, relax, and count his money. But Paul McCartney is as driven as ever. Which is why he’s still making music and why he has loads of great stories you’ve never heard—about the sex life of the Beatles, how he talked John Lennon out of drilling holes in his head (really), and what actually happened when he worked with Kanye.
- What Happened at the Lake
 - Wendell Lindsey is serving life prison for murdering his daughter. Maybe he did, or maybe he’s also a victim — of junk science, personal vendettas, weak investigation, and bad attorneys.

Have a good week! Go Irish!
